

Mass Luminosity Releases Mobile Apps for GTribe

(February 19, 2018, Dallas, TX) – Mass Luminosity, a Dallas based initiator of community experiences that manages large social media channels, and is also parent company to the social network GTribe, announced that it had released its first iOS app for GTribe and updated its recently released Android app.

“We started the iOS app development six months ago, working through different iterations, each thoroughly tested so that on release day the experience would be equal or better than the desktop version of GTribe,” said Angel Munoz, CEO of Mass Luminosity. “The newsfeed scroll speed is the fastest we’ve ever seen, and the user interface is functional and aesthetically pleasing. We’ll continue to improve both the iOS and Android apps, so that our members can easily stay connected to the GTribe global community.”

From its launch in 2014, Mass Luminosity’s GTribe has evolved from an entity purely focused on social networking to an overarching technology company possessing a worldwide audience within its own social network.
